

components – creative minds and social media

collaborating digitally – exhibiting physically

Digital images become components of a physical picture – via social media

Hello,

I am curating a photography exhibition on “social media” in Austria this coming May.

As part of this exciting event, I am putting together a personal project entitled “components” which revolves around social media and the creative people in it.

I am collecting self-portraits from creative minds around the world who I had the opportunity to meet and appreciate through social media.

All images will become “components” of a collage of over 1000 self-portraits from all over the world, printed on canvas, forming one part of the exhibition “social media”.

My project “components” is a reflection of the growing possibilities of social media.

It is a platform for networking collaborations, exchanges of experiences and ideas.

It also shows the impacts on our own creative process.

From now until April, a blog shows the daily progress, makes transparent who joins in with a new image, who says what and who comes from which country or continent.

All participants have the opportunity to put links to their own website on this blog.

Should you prefer not to appear on the blog, please let me know.

I believe you will be an asset to my project, and would be grateful if you would take part in “components”. Without you, the canvas will be blank.

Please send your self-portraits to components@simone-naumann.com

Kind regards,
Simone

<http://www.simone-naumann.com/>

Weblog:

<http://project-components.net/>